Times when I'm available to talk with you and support you—"Office Hours"—subject to revision:

- Tuesdays 10:30 a.m. to 12:00 p.m. in the Writing Center at the Valencia Campus

I can also meet with you at many other days and times. Email me to set a time with me to meet in person—or to Zoom or talk on the phone. (Note: I do not own a cell phone, only a landline, so I can't text.)

Fall 2024

16 week course, August 19- December 6

ENGLISH 1120:

Section 502, CRN: 66348

9:00 a.m. to 10:15 a.m.

VAAS 133 (Arts and Sciences)

Land Acknowledgment

The following is quoted and paraphrased from UNM-Albuquerque's website, with my own added thoughts: <https://diverse.unm.edu/about/land-acknowledgement.html>

“Founded in 1889, the University of New Mexico sits on the traditional homelands of the Pueblo of Sandia.” This refers specifically to UNM-Albuquerque. The statement goes on to identify “The original peoples of New Mexico – Pueblo, Navajo, and Apache.”

The purpose of statements like this is to recognize the significance of Indigenous peoples' histories and presence in our state and to our university. The statement goes on to say:

“We honor the land itself and those who remain stewards of this land throughout the generations and also acknowledge our committed relationship to Indigenous peoples. We gratefully recognize our history.”

While that first sentence is specific to the campus in Albuquerque, we are at UNM-Valencia so there is more to it than that.

Course Description

To do well in college and beyond, students need to become agile writers who can adapt their writing to a wide variety of audiences, contexts, purposes, mediums, and technologies. You must learn to analyze new situations and respond to them appropriately. Instead of teaching one right way of writing, we seek to make students flexible writers who can transfer what they've learned in 1120 to new contexts and new genres.

Student Learning Outcomes

Throughout the semester in English 1120, you will progress toward the following student learning outcomes:

1. Analyze the rhetorical situation for purpose, main ideas, support, audience, and organizational strategies in a variety of genres.
2. Employ writing processes such as planning, organizing, composing, and revising.
3. Use a variety of research methods to gather appropriate, credible information.
4. Evaluate sources, claims, and evidence for their relevance, credibility, and purpose.
5. Quote, paraphrase, and summarize sources ethically, citing and documenting them appropriately.
6. Integrate information from sources to effectively support claims as well as other purposes (to provide background information, evidence/examples, illustrate an alternative view, etc.).
7. Use an appropriate voice (including syntax and word choice).

Course Texts and Materials

The Importance of Mistakes/Writing and Reading/Resources and Support Available to You:

Informal writing you do in this course—and you will do a lot of it!—is PRACTICE, and will be evaluated accordingly. You need to and are expected to make many different kinds of mistakes in this writing. Why? I can think of at least two reasons: first, you and I need to know what sorts of mistakes you make, so you can then know what you need to learn in order to revise and edit final drafts of formal projects; second, and more important, making mistakes is how you learn. If you never make any mistakes, you'll never learn from them. All of us have many, many things to learn about writing, and so we have lots of mistakes to make.

This means I do NOT grade informal short writings for spelling, usage, grammar, structure, paragraph unity, or even whether they make any sense. I do ask that you do them, and that you try to make them readable. You may want to or need to repurpose them later in formal projects.

If you do the work of the course and turn it all in on time, and if you participate in figuring out what it is you need to learn, talk with me and your tutors about that, and work to learn it, you have a strong chance of completing this class successfully. The course is designed so that by doing the work, you practice what you need to learn.

Finding writing and reading to be challenging tasks is normal, because they are both often tough. (Note: the rest of this is going to focus on writing, but it applies to reading too.) I still find writing tasks to be difficult sometimes, and I always will—it's the nature of writing. If you struggle with writing tasks in this class, then you are being a writer and engaging fully with your learning as a writer, and that does not mean you won't accomplish your own goals with writing and the goals of the class.

You already have inner resources to do the writing in this class: you communicate out loud and online to many different audiences for many reasons and you hone your language skills as you do so. You also now have the resources that college students have: your teacher, your classmates, and Writing Consultants in the Writing Center.

Let me break that down:

I (and all your teachers) are resources for you to learn. We want you to reach out to us, to meet with us during drop-in (or “office”) hours. I encourage you to email me with questions you have and to let me know how I can support you. I care about your growth as a reader and a writer and you as a person, and I want you to experience being well-supported in this class.

Your classmates are a resource: you will get to talk with the students in our class in small groups during class sessions, and you will be part of workshops in which all students respond to drafts-in-progress. You will get ideas from the writing choices your classmates make—and you will in turn inspire them with your own work.

Writing Center Consultants are also there for you. They are students like you who have learned how to tutor writing by listening and asking questions. They don’t have all the answers. They can be there with you as you wrangle with writing. Some people think seeking support from a tutor is a weakness. In fact, it’s a superpower to ask for help and to make use of all the resources available to you. In this class, you’ll meet with consultants as part of the process of composing your major projects, and you can meet with them additionally to that—and there are extra credit points in it, though I hope you’ll mainly do it because you have developed the skills of seeking assistance and of expanding your methods of strengthening your writing, which include talking things through with others and sharing drafts with others.

Grading Policy

50%: Attendance, Participation, and Completion of Weekly Practice Writings and 3 short Projects, including first drafts and final drafts turned in on time—basically, everything you turn in to Canvas: full points if you follow directions, do it fully in your own voice, and turn it all in.

NOTE: your grade in Canvas (in “My Grades”) will be THIS 50%, and will include credit for just turning in the final drafts of major assignments and the portfolio.

The following percentages will be from letter grades separate from assignments in Canvas, though you will get points in Canvas for turning in rough and final drafts, and I’ll indicate the letter grades you earn in the notes for the final drafts.

20%: Proposal and Annotated Bibliography (culmination of Inquiry, Research, Documentation, and Annotation Project) (Note: this grade will be assigned for when these projects are due in October or early November. However, you have the option of revising them for higher grades later in the semester.)

30%: Portfolio revision of one of the earlier projects with accompanying Reflection Essay.

IMPORTANT: in order for your Portfolio Revision to be graded, you MUST complete all previous short Projects and the Proposal and Annotated Bibliography.

To pass this course, students must earn a final grade of C (not C-) or higher.

Small, Larger, and Revised Projects

ALL formal writing and homework assignments must be typed and saved as a separate document in order to best facilitate revision. Use a reasonable font and point size (such as 12 pt. Times New Roman). All formal documents that are not slide shows or videos, etc., should be double-spaced with one-inch margins. Be sure to proofread every assignment you turn in. Drafts—early and final—will usually be accompanied by a self-assessment and reflection.

NOTE: Save ALL the writing you do during the semester. You never know what may prove useful during a revision or what I may require you work with or turn in. Keep electronic copies for yourself of all major assignments handed in to me. Make back up copies several places including in the cloud.

Final Portfolio

The end-of-semester portfolio consists of a final revision of an earlier project and a Reflection Essay. Earlier drafts will be in Discussions and/or posted as assignments. We will spend a considerable amount of time working on revision during the latter half of the semester so please stay tuned.

Drop Policy

Dropping or being dropped from a course can affect your GPA, enrollment status, and financial aid/award status. Always talk to your instructor before it's too late about the possible consequences of a drop and opportunities for avoiding it.

A few things to consider:

- A drop before the end of the third week in a sixteen week semester session or the 2nd in an 8 week summer session will not appear on your transcript, and you will not earn credit hours or a grade in the course.
- Your instructor can drop you from the course at any point in the semester before finals for lack communication, and/or not turning in assignments
- If you or your instructor initiates a drop after the third week (for fall or spring) or second week (for summer), you will receive W.
- If no drop is initiated by the end of the semester by any party, then based on your performance and attendance your instructor will use his/her discretion to decide whether to assign you a grade from A+ to F or a W.

In Core Writing, a C or above is passing. When deciding whether or not to drop a course, consider the outcomes of earning a grade below C as opposed to a W, and vice versa. For grades C- to D-, you will earn credit hours, but you will have to repeat the course, and the grade will appear on your transcript and factor into your GPA.

Academic Integrity

Having academic integrity is paramount to your success in any class. Here is the link to the UNM Academic Dishonesty Policy:

<https://policy.unm.edu/regents-policies/section-4/4-8.html>.

Plagiarism

“Plagiarism” is a type of academic dishonesty. It occurs when writers deliberately use another person’s language, ideas, or materials and present them as their own without acknowledging the source.

Types of Plagiarism

Plagiarism can include any of the following:

- Failing to quote material taken from another source.
- Failing to cite material taken from another source.
- Submitting writing that was written by another person.

Plagiarism most often occurs because students aren’t aware of how to properly cite sources, or because students become overwhelmed and desperate. However, in this class you will have lots of support when you have to cite sources formally using MLA (the system we use for citing sources)—you aren’t alone in figuring this stuff out. Most of the writing you will do in this class will be informal, and the main thing you do for that is use quotation marks accurately when you quote what we read (and you’ll be doing that a lot). Make sure you quote the exact words while you are at it!

If you are concerned about how you are doing in this course or about a looming deadline you aren’t sure you can meet, please talk with me instead of considering academic misconduct. You are very capable of meeting my expectations for your writing in this course.

Here’s some recent language that partially restates the above but adds some very current wrinkles:

“Respectful and Responsible Learning: We all have shared responsibility for ensuring that learning occurs safely, honestly, and equitably. Submitting material as your own work that has been generated on a website, in a publication, by an artificial intelligence algorithm, by another person, or by breaking the rules of an assignment constitutes academic dishonesty. It is a student code of conduct violation that can lead to a disciplinary procedure. Please ask me for help in finding the resources you need to be successful in this course. I can help you use study resources responsibly and effectively. Off-campus paper writing services, problem-checkers and services, websites, and AIs can be incorrect or misleading. You can only learn the course material if you complete and submit your own work. UNM preserves and protects the integrity of the academic community through multiple policies including policies on student grievances (Faculty Handbook D175 and D176), academic dishonesty (FH D100), and respectful campus (FH CO9). These are in the Student Pathfinder (<https://pathfinder.unm.edu>) and the Faculty Handbook (<https://handbook.unm.edu>).”

A likely question you have: are you permitted to use ChatGPT in your writing process for materials you turn in for class? The answer, for this class, is “NO.” However, if you are curious about the use of such algorithms in writing and want to research it, I am happy for you to do that for your Proposal and Annotated Bib Projects.

Deadlines: I expect to receive written assignments on or before their due dates. If you arrange with me in advance, alternate assignments and/or due dates are possible.

Attendance Policy: Attendance is extremely important: if you want to pass this course, you must attend class regularly, prepare for class, and participate fully in class activities.

I may drop students who miss class sessions without being in touch with me or doing the make up for the class, or who do not keep up with the work. Similarly, if you consistently fail to participate in the class by not turning in a significant number of assignments or not contributing to group work, you will be dropped.

In the first three weeks of the course, you may be dropped for failing to keep up with the work.

“Extra Credit” or ALTERNATE Credit: I once had a colleague who said, “It’s not an extra credit world.” That may be true, but in this class I am open to your earning some credit in alternate ways. The main/best way is for you to work with a Writing Consultant (tutor) in the Writing Center on one of your writings for this class.

I am also open to other ways you can earn alternate credit: if an assignment doesn’t work for you or you need to make up some stuff, we can talk about a different way of doing that than the assignments that are already part of the course.

Caregiver Responsibilities Policy: I have great respect for students who are balancing their pursuit of education with the responsibilities of caring for children or other family members. If you run into challenges that require you to miss a class, please contact me. There may be some instances of flexibility I can offer to support your learning.

Children on Campus: According to the Catalog, at UNM-Valencia, “Parents must not bring children to University classes or leave children unattended while at campus activities or conducting business on campus.” This is an insurance issue and cannot be waived. If you experience an emergency involving a child in your care that prevents you from attending class, please be in touch with me.

If we ever need to meet class in Zoom, the following policies apply:

How to Do Zoom: It is helpful for me and your classmates to see you during our synchronous meetings in Zoom. If you are able to turn on your video, please do so. When using video, you can use a virtual background; if you don't, make sure your actual background protects your privacy and is respectful to other classmates. If you are unable to turn on the video, or if you have internet connectivity problems when your video is on, you are welcome to leave it off. (I am going to have to turn my own camera off sometimes because my wifi from home is awful.) I encourage you to upload a picture of yourself if you need to turn off your camera. This will help me get to know you.

Relevant to the “Children on Campus” policy above: I do not have any problem if your children, accidentally or on purpose, ending up joining our Zoom class. I completely get it if you need to step away to attend to something during Zoom class, including kids. If they or anyone/anything else is especially high volume, it can be good to mute, or I might mute you.

Zoom Adorable Pet Policy: This next is not REQUIRED, exactly, but is an issue worth considering: if you have a cat or dog or other animal, and that animal happens to photo-bomb your Zoom, that is not only acceptable, it is a kindness you do for all of us. If I notice, I may or may not (I totally will) interrupt what I'm saying in Zoom to appreciate your cat or dog etc.

Respect, Difference, and Class Community: We are all going to read and write together and get to know each other fairly well this semester, and so the following is particularly necessary: the class will be conducted on the basis of respect. This means that, while we might disagree (and in fact discussion and debate are part of the university experience, part of our education) we will do so courteously and with care for each other as human beings. We will all be learning from each other, and we all have things to learn, from each other.

In this class, different perspectives, experiences, and identities are valued as a source of strength. These differences include ones based in culture, race, class, gender identity, sexual orientation, ability, language, and others.

To be clear: I work from a strengths-based, not a deficit, approach. This means that I focus on the strengths you bring because of who you are. And I do this for all your classmates as well. If you have struggled because of systemic injustices in our society (systemic racism or classism or ableism or ageism or misogyny, etc.) then you bring perspectives that can give you powerful things to say in your writing. If your original language is not English, then you bring us linguistic wealth. If you are neurodivergent, you see things some of the rest of us may not. The ways we are all different are precisely the sources of how we can learn from each other, as readers and writers and people.

I would ask especially that we respect each other's writing and interpretations of the readings/texts/videos we experience together, offering encouragement and specific positive response before constructive criticism, making a place where we can write what we need to and share it when we write together. Part of this respect is your right not to share what you write. If we are writing and reading aloud, you may opt to pass. If you do an informal writing and find you don't want to share it in Discussions, you can email it directly to me and I'll still give you points. If you have written a rough draft for a workshop and do not wish to share that draft with other classmates, let me know and I will look at it myself and return it directly to you.

EQUAL OPPORTUNITY AND NON-DISCRIMINATION: The following statement is from UNM Main Office of Equal Opportunity:

“In an effort to meet obligations under Title IX, UNM faculty, Teaching Assistants, and Graduate Assistants are considered ‘responsible employees’ by the Department of Education (see page 15 - <http://www2.ed.gov/about/offices/list/ocr/docs/qa-201404-title-ix.pdf>). This designation requires that any report of gender discrimination which includes sexual harassment, sexual misconduct and sexual violence made to a faculty member, TA, or GA must be reported to the Title IX Coordinator at the Office of Equal Opportunity (oeo.unm.edu). For more information on the campus policy regarding sexual misconduct, see: <https://policy.unm.edu/university-policies/2000/2740.html>.”

In other words, if you tell me (out loud or in writing) about an incident or experience of “sexual harassment, sexual misconduct [and/or] sexual violence” which is based in gender—which can include stalking, and which may have occurred on or off campus—then I am obligated to share that information with our OEO folks. They will follow up with you and provide support and resources you can access. (Ignore the part of the statement above about TAs and GAs—those are just folks who can be your teachers once you are taking Albuquerque Campus classes.)

Technical Support:

- For UNM-Valencia IT Support: if you are on campus, you can go to the support desk just by the Library and Writing Center entrances. You can also call (505) 925-8911. If you don't reach them directly, you can leave a message or create a support ticket <http://valencia.unm.edu/campus-resources/technology-support/contact-ts.html>. For assistance with creating a support ticket or reaching IT, email Kristy Martinez, Administrative Assistant, kmartinez8@unm.edu.
- For UNM Canvas Technical Support: <https://canvasinfo.unm.edu/support/index.html>
- For UNM Web Conference Technical Help: (505) 277-5757, Support :: UNM Web Meetings | The University of New Mexico

SAFEZONE: I have been Safe Zone trained by the LGBTQ Resource Center at UNM-

Albuquerque. This means I have some knowledge of issues and terminology for folks who are lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, and/or queer/questioning (that's what the acronym stands for), I am familiar with resources and support available, and I am committed to being a support and advocate.

I am also one of the advisors for the Gender and Sexualities Alliance at UNM-Valencia—let me know if you'd like to connect with this student group (there's a Discord and events).

Citizenship and/or Immigration Status: All students are welcome in this class regardless of citizenship, residency, or immigration status. I will respect your privacy if you choose to disclose your status. As for all students in the class, family emergency-related absences are normally excused with reasonable notice to the professor. UNM as an institution has made a core commitment to the success of all our students, including members of our undocumented community. The Administration's welcome is found on this website: <http://undocumented.unm.edu/>.

DREAM TEAM: I have also participated in a two day training at UNM by students who are part of the New Mexico Dream Team. This means I have some knowledge of issues faced by people who are undocumented and by their families, and I am familiar with resources and support available.

Accessibility and Universal Design

Your success in this class is important to me. If there are circumstances that may affect your performance in this class, please let me know as soon as possible so that we can work together to develop strategies for adapting assignments to meet both your needs and the requirements of the course.

If you have a documented disability, the Equal Access Services office will provide me with a letter outlining your accommodations. I will then discuss the accommodations with you to determine the best learning environment.

To engage in a confidential conversation about the process for requesting reasonable accommodations for this class and/or program, please contact UNM-Valencia Equal Access Services (Sarah Clawson, Coordinator), at (505) 925-8840 or by email at sjclawson@unm.edu.

I also encourage you to approach me with any other life circumstances that may affect your participation in the course. These may be personal, health- or family-related issues, or other concerns. The sooner I know about these, the earlier we can work together to form a plan for your academic success, such as discussing possible adjustments or alternative arrangements as needed in assignments.

Campus Resources:

PASOS Resource Center

The Resource Center is an on-campus center that serves as a “one-stop” for all non-academic needs of UNM-Valencia students.

Contact: (505) 925-8546, pasos@unm.edu

<https://valencia.unm.edu/campus-resources/pasos/pasos-resource-center/index.html>

Learning Commons: Tutoring Services—and specifically, the Writing Center

Tutoring is available to you in math, science, writing, and other subjects through the Learning Commons: Learning and STEM Centers and Writing Center. In person tutoring is in these centers in the LRC (the building that also has the library). Tutoring in Zoom and, for writing, through email, is also available.

Making use of tutoring is a fantastic way to use your resources and set yourself up to learn deeply and well in your courses.

To schedule an appointment, please go to: Learning Commons Bookings

If you are making an email appointment with the Writing Center, email your draft to tutor@unm.edu after you fill out the form above.

If you have difficulty with the scheduling link above, would like an appointment in a subject not listed at that link, or have a question, email tutor@unm.edu. You’ll get answers during business hours Monday through Friday.

The webpage, with more details about available hours, is here: Learning Commons: Tutoring Services webpage.

You’ll be doing Writing Center appointments as part of your major project sequences, and you will be able to earn extra credit for additional appointments.

COVID-19 Health and Awareness:

As we begin this Fall 2024 Semester, we are (hopefully) coming out of a surge of Covid cases. Therefore, the following info is even more important.

UNM is a mask friendly, but not a mask required, community. If you are experiencing COVID-19 symptoms, please do not come to class. If you do need to stay home, please communicate with me at gillikin@unm.edu; I can work with you to provide alternatives for course participation and completion. Let me, an advisor, or another UNM staff member know that you need support so that we can connect you to the right resources. Please be aware that UNM will publish information on websites and email about any changes to our public health status and community response.
